Reflecting on my journey as a PhD student: Two years on, was it worth it?

It has been two years since completing my PhD and I wonder now how I managed to find the time to do it. During the final six months, I remember a small sense of relief to see the finish line ahead, a medium sized sense of panic of whether it was good enough to be a PhD, a large portion of weariness and a huge sense of grief. This grief came from the fear of emptiness and loss that I thought completion of the PhD would bring.

In the four years it took to complete, what people said would happen, happened. The PhD consumed me. There are full days that I don't remember, lost to hours of reading, writing, just thinking. There were days when I resented how much it consumed me and days where I relished in the time it gave for me to be totally and selflessly absorbed. It gave me a welcome excuse not to do the dishes when it was supposed to be my turn or my turn to do the after school activity run or the weekend teenage party taxi service. The time I snatched during my full time role as a lecturer to lose myself in my own PhD world for a few brief moments was sometimes a welcome distraction. A few minutes to quickly read just one paper and note that reference somewhere, the back of a receipt, a sticky note. As well as honing multitasking skills, I also learned how to multi-think. Although a few times, my daughters caught me out. "Mum, what did I just say to you?" became a familiar joking taunt. The network of colleagues through CAIPE and the support and reassurance from other research students going through the same journey was invaluable. Other colleagues undertaking PhDs who were also juggling full time work and family life reassured me that waking up in the middle of the night to scribble a note, that if missed was going to ruin a whole chapter, reassured me that this was all normal behaviour.

My PhD brought control and calmness during a particularly difficult time when caring for my late father in law who sadly died in my second last year of completion. Sitting by his bedside, in the small hours, were often the times when I wrote the most and with greater clarity than any other times. This unusual burst of writing may have come from his warning to "get that thing finished". Perhaps it was the quality interprofessional collaboration between the teams of community nurses, McMillan nurses and GP that I witnessed first hand as a carer and family member that motivated me to keep going.

A journey that had to come to an end but one of growth and personal development and triggered the start of a new journey. Two years on, the feeling of imposter syndrome “did they really award me with that PhD and was it really good enough?” has started to subside, and the new journey has begun in becoming an established and recognised researcher within my own right. Although a small fish in the big rising sea of interprofessional research, undertaking a PhD to address one of the many research priorities and questions related to interprofessional education and collaborative practice has made a contribution; my contribution.

Without a doubt, it has been a challenging journey. It has given me confidence and clarity to argue a point, although a little more annoyingly argumentative, much to my husband and daughters’ dismay. It has instilled a passion and fire to search for the questions, find the answers and continue to stand by and promote a cause that I am passionate about.

The PhD journey can be lonely, all consuming, exhausting but also can be the steady rock to hold on to and a build important foundations for tackling new questions and helping others to do the same. Two years on, I am taking on collaborative research opportunities and building networks across the globe. I have had the privilege of examining and supervising other doctoral students who are also making important contributions to interprofessional research. The gap I feared in the final stages of the PhD has been filled. Was it all worth it? Yes!

Call for Abstracts: Barcelona 2020

We would like to invite potential participants to submit abstracts to the 3rd International Congress of Health Workforce Education and Research. The Congress will take place in Barcelona, Spain between Wednesday 2nd and Friday 4th September 2020. Colleagues can submit proposals on the overall conference theme of Interprofessional Education or any topic related to our many Working Group themes. Further information can be found in the full Call for Abstract document but if you have any doubt about your abstracts relevance please contact INHWE Director, David Smith, or the relevant Working Group lead. The deadline for proposals is Monday 3rd February 2020 and all abstracts must be submitted via this webform.

Evidence-based Guidance to Scale-up
Integrated Care in Europe

Co-funded by the Health
Programme of the European Union

The work of VIGOUR is moving forward in this ambitious EU project!

The VIGOUR project is well underway with innovative and inspiring work in Integrated Care taking place across all the fifteen VIGOUR regions! From a kick-off meeting in Luxembourg in February, to facilitating workshops at the 19th International Conference for Integrated Care (ICIC19) in San Sebastian in April, project partners in Crete holding meetings for their local stakeholders, to the recent gathering of ambition statements from each care organisation, VIGOUR is off to a flying start.

To keep in the loop of VIGOUR events, activities and future webinars make sure you subscribe below.

Subscribe

The 15 VIGOUR regions

The VIGOUR regions are preparing to take the next step on their journey towards integrated care

As part of the VIGOUR project, 15 regions across seven European countries have begun to prepare the next step on their journey towards Integrated Care. Every care organisation in Europe is faced with different conditions when it comes to Integrated Care model development, be it in economic, technological, organisational, political or socio-cultural regard. Against this background, VIGOUR is going to implement an ambitious programme of context-sensitive support which helps care organisations develop the capacities and capabilities to implement good practices in Integrated Care.

The European regions that have joined forces in the VIGOUR consortium are not starting from scratch. Each region can build on previous efforts to better align care delivery to people with chronic or other conditions across the care chain, albeit in different ways and to different degrees. By passing through the first phase of a multi-staged process, each region is now preparing for the piloting of further care integration steps. All in all, this process comprises three phases:

- The VIGOUR baseline phase: The first phase of the project life cycle focuses on carefully defining which Integrated Care practices are to be scaled up in the participating care organisations. Experiences clearly show that adopting a “one-size-fits-all” model of Integrated Care across the participating care organisations would very likely fail to deliver the desired outcomes. VIGOUR therefore supports incremental, controlled migration from existing work practices and technologies.

- The VIGOUR preparation phase: The next project phase sets out from an initial implementation plan, with its consolidated view on what is to be scaled up in each of the VIGOUR care organisations, and refines plans as to how each care organisation can best put their particular integration ambitions into practice. These will be guided by targeted support measures relying on a contextualised consolidation of the evidence base currently available from existing sources. Beyond this, a crucial part of this support process represents mutual learning and knowledge exchange between involved regions.
- The VIGOUR scaling-up phase: Based on the consolidated scaling-up plans developed by the participating care organisations in the previous stage, local scaling-up pilots will be implemented. The pilots will be operated under day-to-day conditions by the VIGOUR care organisations throughout the remaining project duration.

With the help of the experiences gained from the VIGOUR regions, evidence-based guidance material will be made publicly available at a later stage. Also, check out the VIGOUR website for alerts on scaling-up guidance webinars to be held towards the end of the project.

VIGOUR project kick-off video

VIGOUR shares its first lessons learned at 19th International Conference on Integrated Care in San Sebastian

ICIC19 in San Sebastian provided the first opportunity for VIGOUR partners to share their work with an external audience after the start of the project in January 2019. VIGOUR contributed to two important workshops on capacity and capability building to implement and scale-up integrated care programmes and solutions.

Both workshops addressed the existing need of care organisations for capacity and capability building support to design and implement Integrated Care in their region. The first early morning workshop on Monday was organised by IFIC and DG Sante, bringing together in one room the demand side, i.e. health authorities indicating their support needs for the successful implementation of Integrated Care and the supply side, i.e. organisations or experts offering technical support to address the needs of the demand side.

A second lunchtime workshop was organised by VIGOUR, its sister project Sirocco Exchange and the H2020 funded project DigitalHealthEurope to specifically discuss and prepare twinning opportunities that are offered by the projects.

Nearly 100 people from national, regional and local organisations responsible for planning and/or implementing Integrated Care, health and care service providers, and organisations providing technical support and expertise towards the implementation of health services and integrated care participated in the workshops.

Each project, as well as the EIP on AHA B3 Action Group, will be undertaking further activities on the topic of capacity building and technical assistance in the coming weeks and months. Don't miss out on these opportunities and follow them on Twitter @VIGOUR_EU @SCIROCCOexchange @DHE_2020 and <https://www.yammer.com/eiponahab3integratedcare/#/home>

Workshops Report

UNIVERSITY OF CRETE
SCHOOL OF MEDICINE

The University of Crete's School of Medicine invited their local stakeholders to an introductory meeting about VIGOUR!

The aim of the meeting was to introduce VIGOUR to local stakeholder by presenting its objectives, individual components and expectations. The meeting also sought to initiate the dialogue between stakeholders regarding Integrated Care needs and how each organisation perceives them based on their priorities and expertise. By the end of the meeting, stakeholders were invited to express their interest to engage in VIGOUR's future discussions and facilitate the local implementation and scaling-up of Integrated Care.

Twenty three organisations were invited to this introductory meeting on the 20th of May, 2019. In total, 24 participants from 13 different organisations attended. Some of the emerging themes and priorities included:

- Educational training of health professionals focusing on open communication in the doctor-patient relationship.
- Education of patients (which is among the most difficult tasks)
- Multidisciplinary-based care provision and shared decision-making processes
- Comprehensive patient records as a priority
- Building pathways of care that could be followed by all doctors and could be applicable to all patients
- Significant enhancement for out-of-hospital care (at home or in the community)

The meeting was organised and coordinated by the Clinic of Social and Family Medicine, School of Medicine, University of Crete, under the supervision of Prof. Christos Lionis, Principal Investigator of VIGOUR in Greece.

Meeting Report

VIGOUR's Baseline Phase is underway

Work has kicked off in the Baseline Phase of the project and lead partner empirica has been busy collecting the regional partners ambition statements and how they aim to scale-up. Key questions like Where does our region start from? Where would our region like to go? and What would our region like to gain? were asked of the stakeholders in each pilot region. Each region briefly sketched the efforts which have been pursued to date. By taking these initial descriptions as a point of departure the VIGOUR project will guide the scaling-up framework and achieve more joined-up care delivery processes. More on this exciting work to follow!

For more on this and to keep in touch with VIGOUR activities, remember to subscribe to the newsletter.

Building collaborative leadership

Starts 14 November 2019

Integration and collaboration are central features of current health care policy. The NHS long-term plan has confirmed this by stating that all parts of England will be covered by an integrated care system (ICS) by 2021.

Integrated care systems and other place-based developments require NHS leaders and staff to shift their ways of working and adopt a more collaborative style. This is no easy task in a financially constrained environment.

This programme is for senior staff of NHS providers, chairs and chief operating officers of clinical commissioning groups, directors of public health, and experienced senior directors and clinical leads working in an ICS, sustainability and transformation partnership or place-based leadership team.

It will provide you with protected space to develop the skills and behaviours associated with a more collaborative style of leadership and to explore the style, culture and behaviours within your own organisation and your local health and care system.

Care homes, housing, health and social care learning network

Starts 30 January 2020

Find out more.

This learning network is designed to improve and promote collaborative working between care homes and the housing, health and social care sectors.

Care home residents have some of the most complex health and social care needs in our society. They often experience gaps or discrimination in access to high-quality health care, including support for long-term physical and mental health conditions and specialist palliative care at the end of their lives.

Better partnership working between the housing, health and social care sectors and care homes could enhance the wellbeing of residents and reduce the number of avoidable hospital admissions from care homes. It could also enable older people to have more voice, choice and control over what happens to them, as they would have in their own home.

The learning network is a collaborative initiative between The King's Fund and My Home Life.

Six localities will join the learning network which will offer four one-day meetings. Each locality can bring a group of up to five partners from across care homes, housing, health and social care to the network to support and learn from each other. Each meeting will give your group the opportunity to work on a live project together, develop collaborative leadership skills, as well as hearing from specialist speakers.

Building your authority: Influencing beyond your role

Starts 24 February 2020

We know that it is no longer enough just to have a good idea; now it's more about how to work collaboratively with others to use that idea to create change. Our new building your authority course can help you do just that.

This course aims to look at the gap between your passion, commitment and enthusiasm for change and the practical realities of making things happen within the constraints of both your role and the system.

It will help you to understand how to play a meaningful role in your working relationships and how to develop approaches that will help you navigate the complexities of the health and care system.

Monday 3rd February 2020 - Call for Abstract Deadline
Monday 17th February 2020 - Notification of Acceptance or Rejection of Abstracts
Monday 2nd March 2020 - Early Bird Registration Deadline

Congress Theme - Interprofessional Education

There is now significant evidence to indicate that effective interprofessional education is an innovative strategy that enables effective collaborative practice and improves healthcare systems. The 2010 WHO Framework states that “after almost 50 years of enquiry, the World Health Organization and its partners acknowledge that there is sufficient evidence to indicate that effective interprofessional education enables effective collaborative practice”. Getting to Šibenik

This year's conference takes place in the beautiful UNESCO city of Šibenik. The Amadria Park is the largest convention centre in the Croatia and Adriatic region. The city lies equal distance between Split and Zadar and the distance from both airports is one hour. Coach transfers from Split and Zadar will be available to delegates direct to Amadria Park where all the hotels are located within walking distance from the conference venue. Note, there are direct flights to both Split and Zadar from a huge number of international cities or connections can be made via Zagreb or international hubs such as London, Amsterdam and Paris. Once the summer schedule of flights has been published we will post information to the conference website. If you have any questions about getting to the conference venue please contact us at ICIC20@abbey.ie

Paper Submissions Received Until 31 October

Thank you to all those who have supported us to extend our reach for the call for papers. The number of papers received has now passed the 400 mark but there are still some countries who have not been represented. We ask that you particularly share these details with your country networks so that the message is extended to the very best examples of integrated care.

We will continue to accept submissions until Thursday, 31 October but to support us to efficiently manage the reviewing process and programme design, please don't leave it to the last minute. We appreciate you submitting your papers ASAP. The paper is limited to 500 words and should relate to the conference themes and tracks. Instructions on how to submit a paper are available in the abstract tool once you have created an account.

Key Steps for Submission

Step 1 - Read the guidelines and understand the submission formats

- Visit the conference website and click on the submit an abstract button
- Create abstract submission account
- Register contact details - please note these should be the contact details of the speaker where possible, if you do not have the speaker contact details already you will be asked to edit this contact form at a later date
- Upload the speaker biography and photo
- Consent to use of your data for conference organising and communication purposes
- Read the abstract submission guidelines

- Note there is a different structure for the paper depending on what type of presentation your are requesting

Step 2 - Submit your abstract

- Choose the title of your presentation. Please type the title grammatically correct as this is the way it will transfer to the programme
- Choose submission format (Oral Paper, Poster, Workshop of SIG Meeting - only fully fledged workshops and SIG Meetings will be accepted for review)
- Choose the track(s) that best reflects your project or research. Your choices will help ensure the the Committee can allocate papers in appropriate groupings for inclusion in the program.
- Enter author details (NB - put main presenter details to the top of the list if known)
- Copy and paste abstract in the correct structure summary (max 500 words)
- Read and agree to the publishing waiver
- Answer some final questions relating to the type of paper you are submitting
- Press review and submit (abstracts can be edited up until deadline 31 October)

Step 3 - Receive the review results and secure your place on the programme

- Results of the reviewing process will be available in late November and sent to the individual who registered as the submitter of the paper
- Presenters must register to attend the conference before formally being accepted to the programme
- Presenters can access the early bird discount of 10% off all rates until 31 December
- Presenter briefings will be available on the conference website
- Inquiries around presenter formats should be sent to ICIC20@integratedcarefoundation.org
- Confirm presenter details and submit photo and biography by briefing deadlines

Put your Organisation on the Global Stage

Participation at ICIC20 and partnering can occur in several ways. The International Conference on Integrated Care provides partners with many opportunities to connect with policy-makers, practitioners and researchers working towards integrated care. Over 1,000 global health invested practitioners, academic, researchers and students from around the world are expected to participate in the Conference in Šibenik, Croatia in 2020.

In addition to connecting participants with the valuable resources your organisation provides, your support enables community based leaders and students to attend by offsetting travel and registration expenses. Support from establishments such as yours is critical to the success of the conference. All profit from the Conference will go to the International Foundation for Integrated Care (IFIC). We are a not-for-profit network that crosses organisational and professional boundaries to bring people together to advance the science, knowledge and adoption of integrated care policy and practice. IFIC is also the main supporter of the International Journal of Integrated Care (IJIC).

We are going green in 2020

At ICIC20 we will reduce our carbon footprint and become a greener conference. We will reduce the use of plastic, increase our digital offer over print and recycle where possible. This year's venue is in walking distance from all hotels and the social activities and we will provide shuttle bus links from the local airports. You will find a range of green sponsorship options and will be recognised from the podium for supporting a greener conference.

Extend your reach beyond the conference

By making the conference available to view live online we extend our reach to thousands of integrated care professionals around the world. By aligning your organisation to the live video stream you too can connect directly with potential customers and raise awareness of your brand and its work in the field of integrated care.

The Reduction of Harm Through Interprofessional Education and Collaborative Practice

18–20 June 2020, London

TICKETS AVAILABLE NOW

Interprofessional learning, collaborative practice and integrated care are now at the forefront of healthcare policy makers' priorities. However these policy priorities come with limited guidance supporting their practical realisation. New methods and approaches that scale the chasm between interprofessional aspiration and service reality are called for.

This conference will provide a forum that prioritises deliberations over presentations. Our principal aim is to take on the question of how to realise interprofessionalism and interprofessional learning in ways that impact on how care happens: what kinds of interprofessional learning and working are needed to tackle the increasingly complex circumstances that define the real world of care provision?

FELLOWSHIP DIRECTOR

Director of Research & Innovation

Associate Professor of Surgery, Harvard Medical School

Dr. Yule is a leading academic psychologist with specific expertise and training in organizational psychology, human factors science and mixed methods. He is internationally recognized for his research on assessing non-technical skills and patient safety in surgery. Prior to moving to Boston from Scotland, he developed considerable experience studying team performance and safety in industry sectors as diverse as energy, transportation, and healthcare. Most notably, he was one of the pioneers in developing the 'Non-Technical Skills for Surgeons' (NOTSS) behavior observation system, which is now being implemented for surgical education and research in North America, Europe, Australia, Africa and Asia. Dr. Yule is lead author on several seminal papers on the topic and co-founded the Harvard Non-Technical Skills Laboratory, which brings together a multidisciplinary group of scientists who are passionate about studying the impact of non-technical skills on process measures and patient outcomes, as well as implementing scalable interventions to enhance patient safety. Simulation is core to this mission and at STRATUS, Dr. Yule ensures that the curricula are rigorously developed and reviewed to provide the most immersive and beneficial experience for learners. He represents STRATUS nationally in his roles as vice-chair of the American College of Surgeons (ACS) committee on non-technical skills and as Honorary Fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons of Edinburgh which was awarded in 2019 for his pioneering contribution to education and assessment of non-technical skills globally. Locally, he is also an associate faculty member at the Center for Surgery & Public Health, and Ariadne Labs for Health System Innovation.

ASK QUESTIONS

The 2-year STRATUS Fellowship and the Masters Degree Education gave me the foundation for an enjoyable and productive academic career. I was able to learn from very experienced and thoughtful faculty and also had enough space to develop my own ideas. In addition to exciting, high level simulation education work at BWH I was also exposed to international collaborations and consulting as well as networking and opportunities in the Society for Simulation in Healthcare. Since completing the program I've kept in close contact with the STRATUS team and other alumni and always enjoy the camaraderie and reunions. Choosing STRATUS was a career defining moment and accelerated my career.
